“ We lived next door to Bonnie and Howard for over 20 years. I loved having them as neighbors and friends. To me, Howard was “The Man.” A straight-shooter who never cut corners. The girls in my household always commented how handsome he was. I miss our talks. Bruce Pfeifer

“ I was a mechanical engineer at Westinghouse when I first met Howard about 40 years ago. He helped us with the assembly of a very complicated optical mechanism. I soon learned that nothing was too complicated for Howard. Besides being a great machinist, he was an amazing craftsman who could solve any challenge that we engineers would throw at him. I was incredibly fortunate to have been able to work with him on so many different jobs until I retired in 2010. Howard’s even-tempered, professional approach (with a touch of humor) to any problem always had a calming effect on me because I knew that whatever the problem might be, he would solve it. I think every engineer I knew at Westinghouse/Northrop Grumman always wanted to work with him so he could keep us straight. We lost touch after I retired until several years ago when he tapped me on the shoulder one day at Home Depot. We spent over an hour getting caught up exchanging memories and as I learned about his health problems. When I got home, I told my wife that seeing Howard had “made my day”. After that I tried to stay in touch with my very special friend - a real gentleman who will be dearly missed.
