

Inman McBride

January 20, 1940 - October 21, 2015

No obituary found for this tribute.

Tribute Wall

SH

“ I am shocked and saddened to hear that Mac passed. What hurts the most is that my family tried to reach him for months. We never got a call saying he passed. I will never get to see you one last time. I did not get to pay my last respects. Im hurt that your gone. I will always and forever cherish Mr Mac in my heart. I will never forget the scratch from his mustache on my cheek. And the way he would call my sister teenie weenie no matter how big she got. Im so hurt and sad right now. Mac was my God Father and he was better to me than my real father. He would always come by with these big jars of Vaseline. I remember one summer day he let me ride in his truck and I spent the whole day with him making deliveries all around town while he made me suffer through talk radio the whole day. But since we had Boston Market for lunch I forgave him. My goodness and those bushy eyebrows that made him so special to me. Whenever I called he was there for me without hesitation. Not once did he let me down. From taking us to the carnival as kids to coming to my rescue to get me off the side of the road when my car broke down. He always made sure I was good. My heart is heavy today. I will miss you

Sherrice - February 05, 2016 at 04:43 PM

AW

“ We are lighting this candle as a symbol of the warmth we feel in our hearts for you, forever. We are eternally grateful for the kindness you have shown through the years.

Annie Faye, Anthony, Yahya and Jabari Watson - January 11, 2016 at 01:44 PM