Josh was the youngest of five children. His love of sports started at a very young age. He wrestled in a rec league as a child. He was a lifetime lover of ice hockey. He played in high school and beyond, even playing for a short time on a AAA team. He was a lifelong Toronto Maple Leafs fan. He instilled his love of hockey in his son, Joseph and his daughter, Kimberly. One of the highlights of Josh's life as a father was sharing the love of the game with his kids. “ Josh was a great friend. He was last to talk about himself & first to ask how I was doing, to ask about how things were going in my life.
We talked often about our families, kids, our pets & of course hockey! He was so proud of his kids.
Everytime we saw each other, we parted ways with a smile & a hug. I truly cherish the time I was blessed to share with him & the friendship we had, short though it may have been.
