“ Our baby lived to travel. I have an idea where she may have gotten that from. She recently told me her favorite country to visit was Cuba. I shockingly asked why. She paused and said because of the people. \n\nBased upon that I am adding Cuba to my bucket list. We are so thankful that she was able to visit and experience over 30 different countries. \n♥

“ When I was in high school, I only had a select few amount of friends. This wasn't by choice. I was also diagnosed with type 1 diabetes in high school, which led me to meet the other 4 diabetics who went to my school. Of them, Lindsay was one, and we hit it off right away. She was quiet, but bubbly. Sweet but sassy. And lovable yet strong. I'd never met anyone like her, and she befriended me almost instantly. She was one of the 3 people who showed up to my sweet 16 party. She was always asking if I wanted to hang out. With her, I got the chance to truly feel friendship, and now hearing of her passing only 20 years later, not only breaks my heart, but breaks my soul. I feel as though I've lost a piece of myself and a crucial part of my past that shaped who I currently am. Lindsay, I'm sure you're up there eating everything you possibly can, with no need to take a shot for any of it, and for that, I'm slightly jealous. I know that others have said very similar things, but the world just isn't the same without you in it. You are exponentially missed and loved. Until we meet again my dear friend. Much love ♥

“ I have known Lindsay for as long as I have known Kayla and what has always stuck with me is Lindsay’s amazing heart. She has always been so witty and quick to shoot off a joke or zinger (especially at my husband’s expense) while we are in her presence. She loves her family deeply and has always been her nieces and nephews biggest supporter. I adore Lindsay and will never forget her dedication for her family, her warm heart, but mostly I will miss her giant smile and passion for life!

“ Lindsay you will truly be missed. I always knew that if there was a family get together and you were in town that you would be there. I’ll miss seeing your face and your beautiful smile at every occasion. I was often envious of you always going to travel to different places that I I’ve always wanted to go. I am glad that you are no longer in pain.

“ Sweet, beautiful Lindsay, I always think about the fun we had working together. Your smile would light up the day, you were always laughing, and all the Residents and staff loved you. Gone much too soon, you will forever be the brightest star in the sky, the most colorful butterfly and the beautiful cardinal always watching over your loved ones. Rest in Pease, Lindsay, you will be truly missed.

“ My world has crumbled at my feet. They say you can't teach grief and I promise you it's true. We have lost a sister, my kids lost their aunt and my parents lost their daughter. My sister was and will always be the backbone to this family. Her true happiness was when all of us were in the same room. If she had $10 to her name it was spent on something my kids want. The gift that she gave was always herself. She showed up invited or not. If my front door opened it was always her. Bearing gifts of things she knew we needed, some sort of food and always with a sassy attitude. In March she moved around the corner from me and my kids so she could be closer and at all of their sports, school events and anything else that came up. She did this without asking and the list of things she has always done went without asking. I've laughed the hardest with her, I've cried the hardest with her and I learned to love the hardest from her. She was my first best friend - a year and 2 days apart- she had my back through and through. God gave me her to see the best in myself and although the gift feels short-lived in my earthly sense my time with her is a gift that will keep giving. As I peel myself up off the floor and try to live this life without her it won't be without confidence that she left a mark on everything that holds worth in this world. My sissy, my nobies, my best friend I love you and will always search for you in all that is good. \n\n-Love Kayla your sissy

“ My Beautiful Granddaughter, she was one of a kind. What I remember most was every time there was something going on in the family she would call me and say grandma what's the address and you can be sure she was going to show up regardless of where it was I have GPS she would say. Lindsay really loved her family and we all loved her you will be truly missed Lindsay. We all love you R.I.H. HEAVEN GOD NEEDED AN ANGEL AND HE CHOSE YOU\n🙏🙏🙏❤️❤️❤️

“ To my big sister,\n\nAs the days go by the sadness grows. I can't put into words the love I have for you and the pain writing this brings me. I long for just another conversation with and it hurts that I can't have that. You were always there for me when I needed you the most. It did not matter the time of day or what you had going on. I miss the talks and just catching up with you. The random questions about your car, the weird size clothing and gifts will always hold a special place in my heart. There is no one on this earth that could even compare to you Linds. Just unique and special in your own way. Ahh Linds, I'm just glad you're free from all of that. Until the day we meet again, I love you and I know you'll watch out over us till then.\n\nYour baby brother \nJordon

“ My favorite memory is a picture of Lindsay and Kayla. They were pretending they were camping and took everything out of the refrigerator and put it on the coffee table in the living room. What a mess they made!!! Love you Lindsay!! Give my mom a hug and kiss for me. 🥰

“ The last time I saw Lindsay was on the worst day of my life. It was on the day we laid to rest her Godmother. Lindsay and I spoke about her calling me and coming over to see me. She had all the information in her phone. We talked about my flip phone yes, my flip phone not one of the new flip phones. We laughed and joked about my phone. I still see her SMILE and her FACE, and I still hear her VOICE say OH TOM. REST IN PEACE LINDSAY. YOUR GODFATHER.

“ Lindsay always had us laughing. She was fierce and was never afraid to speak how she felt. If she was ever looking for her place in this world, she found it with her family and friends. Her kind heart really shimmered when she was with the kiddos. Lindsay will always live through our hearts and memories <3 forever grateful for that <3 Also.. Hollister, skater shoes and cup of noodles :)

“ Dear Lindsay,\r\n\r\nTo someone who was nearly a Sister to me for a decade, and an Aunt to Kaylee. You were family to us. As much as it hurts us all down here that you are no longer around to spread your intelligent wit, knowledge, random questions that had all of us laugh at times. We are at peace knowing you are happy, healthy, and are able to live and love as freely as you'd like. Don't forget the many people you are now in charge of watching over. I will forever cherish every memory, the many times you sat with me and watched One Tree Hill, or the many times you sat with me at my lowest. You were always there no matter the time or day. You always answered regardless. You were gifted a one of a kind heart that no one will ever be able to compete with. We all will never forget about the get together's and you always digging into the food before it was all done, it wouldn't be you if you didn't do that. One thing about you that always made me laugh was you and the canned whatever you craved at the time, with a bubble bath. You taught us many things, and even with you not being here you're still teaching us things. How to be strong, and how to not let the hard days break our strength. You will never be forgotten, your legacy will never dim but shine even brighter. We will miss you forever and love you more than words can even express. May you rest easy
Linds.\r\n\r\nLove,\r\n\r\nKaylee & Brittany

“ I remember Lindsay always hanging out at our house. If she was spending the night, she would ask Addy or me to get her some pajama pants and fuzzy socks. She would always ask Kayla for a pink and orange comforter; it was her favorite blanket. I love you, Lindsay💕

“ The loss of a childhood friend.... When your young you don't think about death. You spend you times climbing trees, playing tag and hide and seek like we did. We had quite the squad lol what a way to grow up. You and Kay were so cool to me, I looked up to you guys and I wanted to be just like you. Lol You always let me tag along. Then adulthood was here, and even still you always looked out for me. I miss spending weekends together bingde watching One Tree Hill and the OC because you had both shows on dvd lol they were you fav. I never admitted it but they ended up being my fav too haha. I'll be missing you my friend ❤️
