“ Neil was my Mother's youngest brother and has been in my life since the day I was born. He was a huge part of our lives and at times, seemed more like an older brother than an uncle to me. When we were kids he would often help us with us school assignments and projects. I remember sitting in our back yard and he read "The Hobbit" to us. As a result, I became a huge fan of the author and continued to study and read his works.

Neil was also a musician and music was a huge part of his life. He had worked as a concert promoter, band manager, equipment manager and sound engineer. He would often take my sister, myself and my cousins to shows, concerts and nightclubs. On occasion, he would even introduce us to a Rock-N-Roll star or two. Neil somehow got my parents, who rarely left Baltimore, to travel with him to Frankenmuth, Michigan to enjoy the very famous music festival featuring Polish music and the band he toured with "The Fabulous Hubcaps." He was a very well read, well travelled and an extremely intelligent person.

One of his favorite places was London, England and he spoke often of the time he had spent there, always planning to return.

Neil passed peacefully after a long, grueling and painful battle with cancer and he will be missed by my family and many friends.
