“ Bob I never forgot your Birthday was yesterday. I just had a hard time dealing because it was your first since passing. I will never forget and will always love and miss you. Hopefully it was your best Birtday yet. Rest in peace my son. May God be with you.

“ Hey Bob, making my rounds. Your mom's birthday and Ricks 7 year mark. Hopefully you are all together celebrating. It sure is crazy how things change at a blink of an eye. Here today gone tomorrow. But you will never be forgotten, will always be loved and missed. And like it or not, I will always be your Dad. Love you son.

“ Bobby,

It is hard to believe you have moved on to a better place. I know you are loving being reunited with your brother and mother. You also can enjoy the rest of your family that passed before you as well. The best is that you are healthy and not suffering anymore, your mind and body are free. You may have had difficulties with life but you always were there for me when I needed you. You helped me out a lot around the house, and were always willing to do anything asked of you. Even on bad days, I could count on you when I needed you. I know you knew that I always loved you and that I still do. I miss you.

Your Aunt Laura.

“ Bobby you were quite a mixed bag for sure. But most of all you are my son. Through good or bad I have and will always love you. I'm sorry I couldn't help you more with your demons. God knows I tried but just failed you. I'm so sorry you are gone. But at the same time relieved that you are finally at peace with your mother and your brother. May you forever be happy and full of joy in your new endeavor that you have now embarked on. Yes I will truly miss you. But in the end I will see you again some day and I will celebrate that. Again to my son, I miss and love you dearly.
