“ These working hands (Tribute to my Dad) These working hands are so tired and old, it's now time to give them to the Lord to hold. When I cross over, do not cry. Instead, think of me in the garage varnishing a piece of wood, or cutting the grass on a sunny afternoon. With these working hands, I leave all my earthly possessions to you, to remember me by with love and gratitude. Don't panic if you feel a gentle touch on your shoulder, or a tug on your arm. It was me sharing my love and my charm. These working hands will hold your hand as we walk side by side. Just call out and I'll be there for you, quick, on the fly. To my loving wife Rose, I love you so much. When I reach out to you in spirit, you'll feel my tender loving touch. Think of me fondly and do not mourn, one day you will join me in the House of the Lord. Through this tribute I convey my message to you---live life to the fullest and never forget that I loved each one of you.
