“ Dear Mom, October 19,2024 will always be a day that I look back on with immense sadness. As this first anniversary of you passing come around this year,I am still missing you just as much as the first days without you. While I'm without you in the physical sense, you seem to be just as present spiritually. I have received all kinds of signs you're still watching over me. I pay attention to it all Mom, I know it's you. I've read clocks and it seems like I always turn my head to check the time at the right moment and see 6:18 in first thing in the morning. If I even utter your name you'll send me a sign. I received them from Dad too. Some people might think it's pure coincidence but I don't think so, I know it's you. I've even seen license plates too. Ill always look for those signs Mom, so keep talking to me, tell Dad too. I love you, always have always will. Missing you forever.

“ Soon will be our first Christmas without you. It was one of your favorite holidays. I remember well, how you couldn't wait for this time of year to come around and how much you'd look forward to midnight mass at St. Michael's every year. And always said our church always looked beautiful and even when we moved away for a while, St. Michael and Baltimore truly were home.I hope you're somewhere in heaven putting up a tree and putting on top of it the most beautiful star. But Mom, our Christmas tree here never needing our brightest star more. And, that star had always been you. And having you and Daddy, has always been the best present you both ever could have given us. I love you, I miss you, give Dad the biggest hug. I'll see you both again one day even though for now I can see you in my dreams. Rest in peace until we meet again

“ Dear Mommy, I miss you terribly. I know you're with Daddy now and that warms my heart to know you're finally back together again. It was my honor to be your daughter and to have been given the privilege to take care of you and give you back half of what you've given me. You have always been my touchstone and my rock and I hope even in some small way I have been yours. I Love You deeply and you'll forever be in my heart until we meet again my Angel, my mother and my best friend.
Forever and Always,
Sandy
