“ I knew Rich from my time as a student athlete at Johns Hopkins. Moscey was his nickname which many student athletes called him. Simply put, he was one of the nicest people anyone would ever meet. He didn't have a bad bone in his body. I will always remember how positive he was- it is a lesson I try and carry forward to this day. I can't ever once remember him complaining. Whenever I thought I was having a bad day, he always made me feel better. The world needs more people like him. Moscey was very detail orientated. He could remember facts from games that were 30 years ago like they were yesterday. I will miss our many conversations that I thoroughly enjoyed. i would do anything to have one more conversation with him. Rich also took such pride in his craft. The world was a better place because of him. I will always remember him. Him legacy is a blessing.
